the promotion of entrepreneurship in higher education appears in the political spectrum as a new economic policy arena in this field policy blanks and new kinds of problems need to be addressed scholars agree that many of the current structures and models in higher education do not fit the necessary requirements for the development of entrepreneurship training new perspectives in this field can be gained through an analysis of the feasibility of a policy transfer of the German Exist II program to Mexico. This program was developed to address the entrepreneurial potential within higher educational institutions through the coordination of entrepreneurial efforts carried out by regional, national, and supranational actors. An empirical analysis of the objectives, regulations, actors, and governance personnel, staff, financial resources, beneficiaries, and output of the program, as well as a comparative study of Germany versus Mexico, is presented in this book. It demonstrates under what conditions the transfer of know-how from Germany, specifically from the Exist II program to universities in Mexico, could be implemented. The research offers alternatives to improve the current ongoing initiatives in Mexico.

This book elaborates on the combined challenges regarding intrapreneurship, sustainability of human resources management (HRM), and digital transformation faced by today's organizations. Representing the first such attempt in current management literature, it explores the sustainable HRM approach which focuses on connecting internal and external factors so as to achieve positive outcomes not only for the respective organization but also for the society, economy, and environment. It also discusses cases related to HRM's role in establishing a corporate sustainability culture while also working to promote employee engagement, satisfaction, performance, and well-being. In closing, the book discusses the new opportunities provided by digitalization and connectivity in the field of intellectual capital, which make employees the central focus of the organization in order to create sustainable competitive advantages.
